State of the Campus Address

- President Loh praised shared governance in American higher education as a unique form of academic democracy.
- President Loh enumerated several areas of growth and improvement during his tenure, both on campus and in the surrounding community:
 - He noted that the University has received over $550M in external research funds and highlighted the strategic partnership with UMB.
 - He also commented on the rising academic profile and diversity of admitted students.
 - He discussed the University's efforts to redevelop the College Park and Prince George's County communities, including public-private partnerships to create new retail and dual-use facilities and improve public transportation.
- President Loh reported that the Honors College at the University is being transformed to include a series of seminars on specific themes in order to provide a more integrated experience, build coherence, and prepare students to move into departmental Honors programs. He also shared that the University plans to construct two new dorm buildings to house the entire Honors College.
- He announced that the University had raised $985 million through its Fearless Ideas: The Campaign for Maryland capital campaign, fulfilling 2/3 of the campaign's $1.5 billion goal in half the time. He stated that the University hopes to be able to set aside $100 million for need-based financial aid for students.
- President Loh reflected on the death of Jordan McNair and noted that over half of the recommendations presented in the Walters report had already been implemented. He expressed his belief that the University could have a successful athletic program that prioritizes the health and wellbeing of student athletes.

Senate Chair's Report

- Chair Walsh reported that the Chancellor and the Board of Regents had acknowledged receipt of the Senate's Resolution Condemning the Actions of the Board of Regents.
- He noted that as part of the Senate's Resolution to Improve the Status of Shared Governance in the University System of Maryland \(USM\), the Senate Executive Committee (SEC) was charged with compiling a pool of candidates from the campus community for consideration by the Chancellor during the development of the presidential search committee. He urged Senators to submit nominations to the SEC by Friday, December 7th and noted that the Senate leadership was planning to meet with the Chancellor to discuss the suggestions from the Senate.
- Walsh reminded Senators that the first meeting of the spring semester would be on February 5, 2019.
- He announced that the Senate Office had initiated the process for electing new faculty Senators and noted that the candidacy/election process for all staff, student, and single-member constituency Senators for 2019-2020 would begin on January 22, 2019.
